

PRESS WITH A RECORD.

Old Washington Hand Press Doing Service in Manhattan

The Manhattan Mail, the first paper published in the bustling southern camp, and one of the newest publications of that section, is printed on a Washington Hand Press. Not that the Washington hand press is anything of a novelty, but this press is a pioneer of the West and of Nevada. It has a most interesting history, and many's the gem of note that came from its embrace.

The press was moved, together with the material, from Belmont, the former county seat of Nye county, where Hon. Andrew Maute, now the State Printer, used the press to publish the Belmont Courier, one of the papers that made a name for him and the county he represented in Legislative halls and later on the general staff of the State. He took charge in 1875 and maintained the publication up to 1889, when he moved to this city, and the paper was allowed to rest in 1892, to be revived in Manhattan, but fifteen miles from his former home.

The old press was a resident of this city for a number of years being brought here from Marysville, California in the early sixties, where it was used to print the Marysville Appeal. A bull team hauled it over the summits to Carson. Upon its arrival in this city it was used to produce the Carson Independent, the first daily paper in this city. From there it was installed in the office of the Carson Daily Appeal and remained there until placed in the back ground by a cylinder press.

The next paper to take a turn at the old boy was the Carson Register, and when this paper died the press was removed to Belmont. This was in 1875, when that camp was one of the liveliest in this State.

As the press is doing as good work as any in the State, its life is yet young and the probabilities are that it will pass to other camps and help make money and records for the men who come within its inky shade. It is a relic but a mighty good one.

Killed by a Pebble

GOLDFIELD, Feb. 10.—Arthur Carl a German miner, is dead from being struck on the head by a small stone which fell from the top of the Garrett shaft on the Combination mine. Although the pebble was less than an inch in diameter it struck with great force, dropping a distance of 175 feet.

Judge Bell held an inquest and censures the leasers operating the shaft for not taking proper precautions to prevent rocks falling upon the workmen in the mine.

Splendid Attraction to be Offered Next Friday.

Seldom has a play received such universal praise as that bestowed upon Stephens and Linton's merry musical laughing comedy of complications in three acts, "My Wife's Family." Everywhere presented last season, it called for return dates, such entire satisfaction did both play and players give. The story of the comedy is based on the much maligned mother-in-law topic, and was built for laughing purposes only. It has served its object well. Both Messrs. Stephens and Linton are prolific writers of lyrics and comedy, as well as performers of note, consequently are fully conversant with the wants of the theatregoing public. In building "My Wife's Family" they have taken into careful consideration, all that is expected of the actor to please the public in general. Among the notable cast of farce players will be found high class vaudeville artists, well known comedians, while the female contingent assist with their excellent voices and pretty dances.

MILERO "AMERICANS"

A Popular Class of Performers for Next Week

There are few burlesque and vaudeville organizations which play this City, that are as popular as Miner's "Americans" which is the attraction at the Opera House February 14th.

The style of entertainment presented by this Company differs considerably in its general aspects from the average performance of burlesque and vaudeville companies. In place of the usual burlesque, an original up-to-date musical comedy in two acts entitled "A Yankee Doodle Girl," written by Barney Gerard, is presented. This piece is said to abound in the funniest of situations and is so constructed, that the various members have ample scope for their talents. During its action specialties, dances, medleys, marches and ensemble numbers will follow in rapid succession. The piece is staged with beautiful settings, gorgeous costumes, and novel electrical effects. The singing of the girls is said to be far above the average kind of burlesque companies. The company carries a complete set of scenery, and the costumes are said to be very elaborate.

Between the first and second acts a splendid olio is presented and includes, Fisher and Clark, Joe Goodwin, May Butler and as an above feature, the phenomenal and sensational melodramatic moving picture "The River Pirate."

Man Disappears

Isaac Miller, one of the proprietors of the Valley Meat Market of Yerington has mysteriously disappeared. The last seen of Mr. Miller was on Monday night of this week when he stayed in the barber shop of Whittaker and Bosch until after 10 o'clock. He did not make his appearance at his place of business Tuesday morning, and upon examination it was found that he did not sleep in the room in the rear of the butcher shop, which he usually occupied. When Mr. Miller failed to appear at all during Tuesday his friends began to think it strange and made inquiries about the valley. It was found that he had not been seen by anyone. Telegrams were sent to Schurz, Dayton, Hawthorne, Wabuska and other places and the replies were that he had not been seen in any of these places.—Lyon County Times.

Wireless Telegraph

G. A. Billings, of the Pacific Wireless Telegraph Company, was a visitor in this city yesterday. He will remain here several days talking over the situation with the people.

As wireless telegraphy is now an assured fact and no guess work, it is more than probable the system will reach over the mountains, and when it does the people will get some pretty keen action as it only needs competition to shake up the old Western Union.

AFTER THE TREES

The Annual Fever Spring Out Among the Citizens.

Nearly every spring property holders in this city catch a tree-trimming fever, and, not content with mere trimming, they swing the axe in the original growth and denude their lands of the trees that have taken half a century to grow. The property is their own but when it is cut clear of the shade trees it depreciates the property value fully on half.

The trees of this city, be they cottonwood, poplar or any fine shade tree, have taken untiring efforts for many years to cultivate. They were all planted, as the valley was practically a desert when the white man first set foot upon the plain. The trees came from the east and the west and many a one that has been ripped out by the tree trimming enthusiast required hand watering and gentle nursing to bring it to its present state of beauty and utility.

Carson is known the State over as the Garden City, and rightfully so, but all on account of the trees and not on account of the homes or the people. Without the trees this city is simply a good piece of farming land and nothing more.

It is considerable pleasure to spread your tent under your own fig tree, but several of our citizens will be too busy hunting for quarters to find shade enough to keep off the freckles.

BUYS MINING PROPERTY

Corey Invests in Douglas County Mines

GENOA, Douglas County, Nevada, February 9.—Papers were received for record today by the county recorder of Douglas county, which in effect consummates the sale of the Adavene mine in the Eagle mining district of Douglas county by Dr. J. C. Hennessy of Reno, Washoe county, to Laura B. Corey of the same place for $10,000. The development of the Eagle mining district has been retarded for many years by reason of the fact that a band of claim jumpers have repeatedly relocated the various claims in the district without even doing the assessment work required by law. This has led to bloodshed in several instances. Many leading experts believe that this district, if properly developed, will rival Tonopah and Manhattan and it is hoped by the law abiding citizens of this section that with the influx of capital headed by Mrs. Corey, the district will develop into one of the richest in the history of the State.

A sidetrack 4000 feet in length is being constructed from the Goldfield depot to the ore sampling plant at Columbia.

BUILDING BOOM

Carson will see Several New Additions to her Commonwealth

There is evidently a building boom in sight for this city, as several fine structures are contemplated and planned for this city as soon as the weather settles where the contractors can rely on it and then active work will commence.

Work of hauling material for the new library building for the State has been in progress during the week and the contractors are on the ground. It is their intention to rush this building along as fast as possible as the stone is about cut at the prison and there is not apt to be any delay for material.

The erection of the addition to the State bank will be among the early features in the way of building, as the bank people are in a rush to get into larger quarters. This building being on Main street will help appearances in every quarter.

The Nevada Press Company is clamoring for more room, and the owner of the building will, in the early Spring, add the required quarters, which will extend into the lot back of the present building.

The Masonic Lodge of this city is looking about for a chance to build a temple, and it is understood that they have taken an option on a splendid piece of property on Main street. As the Masons never do anything by halves the people can rest assured that a fine building will grace this city.

There is also talk of the erection of several private homes during the summer months, and several of the people who have made their stake in the Southern section are figuring on building in this city. It has all the appearance of a building boom for Carson.

Kinkaid Mill at Goldfield

The Goldfield Review publishes a lengthy review of the Kinkaid mill just put in commission at Columbia and now running on Sandstorm ore and giving highly satisfactory returns. The plant, with concentrating tables and other up-to-date attachments cost $25,000 and its present daily capacity of thirty tons can be enlarged at any time required, it having been constructed with that object in view. The Review pronounces it the most complete ore reduction plant in the State.

More Rain

After a couple of days of threats, rain began falling in this valley last evening and was doing its best to make a record for February at a late hour last evening. The storm came without wind and promises to be a general benefit throughout this section.
